Merv Stauffer

Dear Merv:

Ken is an excellent writer. The draft started out to be very interesting but it seemed to end very matter-of-factly.

Ken's relentless efforts to describe Ron Davis as a flippant, childish, least qualified blackman, will be in direct contradiction with the opinion of those who know him personally. A Master of Martial Arts (3 categories) and an EDS manager; Ken's description is in error.

Actually, if the description of Ron Davis is not corrected, it would be extremely difficult for any reader to believe, not only the story, but the character descriptions of the other team members as well.

Flippant means; disrespectful, levity, voluble. The true description should have been; cheerful, concerned, physically fit, confident with discipline.

Other than a few type errors, character descriptions, and a better ending, it was super!

Hey Merv, don't you think in Ken's description of me, he could have added "Handsome"?

Ron Davis
