EVACUATION AND SCHOOL CAMPS IN SCOTLAND

Unveiling a tablet at the inauguration of the first Scottish evacuation and school camp, near Edinburgh, on Saturday, Mr. JOHN COLVILLE, Secretary of State for Scotland, said that it would have six dormitory huts, each with teachers' rooms and a common room for teaching purposes, an administrative building, an assembly hall, and hospital and sanitary units. It would accommodate some 350 children and teachers. Under the Camps Act, the Scottish Special Housing Association was to construct a number of camps, but the scheme had the great merit that it would serve the purposes of peace as well as those of war.
