COURSE TO DEAL WITH EPILEPSY EFFECTS

Relatives, friends, teachers, employers and co-workers of persons with epilepsy may reach a better understanding of the disorder through a special course offered this summer at SVSC.

"Understanding Epilepsy" will be held from 7 to 10 p.m. July 10, 12, 17 and 19 in 153 Pioneer Hall on campus. It will be taught by Dr. and Mrs. William Doll of Saginaw, who are parents of an epileptic child and active members of the Saginaw Valley Epilepsy Association. Dr. Doll is chairman of the SVSC Management Department.

The course will show how the disorder affects its victims, their families and associates, and will offer suggestions on how persons whose lives are in any way touched by epilepsy can better cope with the condition.

Interested persons should call the SVSC Center for Placement and Continuing Education at 790-4070 (695-5325 from Midland or Auburn) for registration information. The course fee is $24 per person, with an optional textbook, "The Epilepsy Handbook", available for an additional $5.50.

DR. CHAPMAN AT HOME IN PIONEER HALL

If you've noticed a new face leading visitors around the newly-dedicated Pioneer Hall, it's probably Dr. George Lincoln Chapman, former director of the National Science Foundation's Elextec Project, now associate professor of engineering and technology.

Dr. Chapman, a native of Shepherd now living at 3320 Pencombe Place, Flint, devised the Elextec Project as a personalized, multi-media approach to electronics engineering instruction while at Trident Technical College, Charleston, S.C. from April 1976 to May 1978. The project was presented at the Frontiers in Education Conference at the University of Illinois in October 1977.

From September 1957 to January 1976, Dr. Chapman served on the faculty of General Motors Institute, where he developed and taught courses in industrial electronic processes, circuitry and instrumentation, logic systems and computer process control systems. He was also consultant and thesis advisor for the institute's engineering problem studies program.

Dr. Chapman received his Ph.D in higher education administration from the University of Michigan in 1972 with a dissertation on psychometric prediction of engineering student persistence. He earned a master of science degree in electrical engineering there in 1966, after receiving a bachelor's degree in industrial engineering at the General Motors Institute in 1949.

Dr. Chapman served in the United States Navy from 1944 to 1946 as a vocational training officer at Paris Island, S.C., and electronics officer responsible for electronic equipment installation on ships at Mare Island Navy Yard, California.

He is an active senior member of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers, Inc. and a member of the American Society for Engineering Education.

Dr. Chapman and his wife Geraldine have a son, Christopher Lincoln Chapman, who lives in Grand Blanc.
