SIGNS OF THE TIMES AT SVSC

It's hard to miss a 15-foot cardinal, so no doubt even the most preoccupied member of the campus community has noticed the new signboard at the intersection of Bay and Pierce. But many of you may have questions about how and why the giant SVSC Cardinal came to roost at that particular nesting spot.

The sign, which will be used to post both athletic and other SVSC activities on a weekly basis, was hatched by Tom Duclos, a 1974 graduate, with Dr. Eugene Hamilton in the wings as midwife. When he was organizing the Cardinal Club as an athletic fundraising group last year, Hamilton felt the sign would help to focus public attention on happenings here on campus. He convinced Duclos to sponsor the project, and the planning began.

Duclos hired an artist to design the big sign, and presented several sketches to the college administration. The Cardinal logo was selected as the favored design element, and Duclos started the task of converting sketch to finished product. Actual construction began early this summer.

In addition to paying all costs involved in constructing the sign and installing electrical service to the floodlights that will illuminate it, Duclos also got involved in some of the work. He can personally attest to the depth of conduit trenches, for example.

With the final touches put on his feathers only days before, and letters for the case arriving in the nick of time, the big bird was ready to tell the world about the SVSC-Indiana Central game on September 7. Duclos posted the message himself the morning of the game.

Responsibility for updating the sign has been turned over to college personnel. It will post home athletic events, and can be used for concerts, plays, art shows and similar events open to the public. Persons who would like their activity posted should call Information Services at ext. 4054.

SVSC FOUNDATION NAMES COORDINATOR

Kermit A. (Kert) Lehman has been named Coordinator of Corporate Relations and Athletic Development for the SVSC Foundation. The Foundation receives private contributions for SVSC.

Lehman's responsibilities include coordination of athletic fund raising activities and events. Major annual projects in that area are the Cardinal Run, slated for October 5 this year, and the Cardinal Club, an on-going organization of people interested in supporting SVSC's varsity sports programs.

As membership chairman of the Cardinal Club, Lehman will seek both new and returning members for the organization. There are varying levels of participation available, which include game tickets and other benefits.

The Cardinal Run is a walk-run-jog event open to individuals and non-profit organizations. Participants seek pledges, with proceeds split between the organization they represent and SVSC.

Lehman also will work with area business and industry to develop areas of mutual support and cooperation with the college. Previous SVSC Foundation activities with the business community included the Annual Business Commitment (ABC), which paired community leaders with SVSC personnel.

Lehman comes to SVSC from the Midland Community Tennis Center, where he served as activities coordinator since 1981. Previously he was employed by the MDS Courier Corporation in Seattle, Washington, and was a stockbroker with Shearson, Hayden and Stone in Seattle. He also held various positions with Paine Webber in Seattle and Milwaukee, and taught at the junior high level in Milwaukee. He is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Lehman's appointment fills a vacancy created when Pam Binder, former coordinator of annual funds, left the Foundation. Lehman and his wife, Mary, are the parents of two children, Steve (16) and Kate (13).

SVSC TO HOST CHINESE LECTURER

Professor Lu Gu-sun from Shanghai, China, will be lecturing at SVSC at 8:00 p.m. on Thursday, September 26. His lecture, titled "Chinese Literary Commitment and Heroism," is open to the campus community free of charge. It will be held in the Wickes Hall faculty lounge.

Professor Lu currently is in the United States as a senior Fulbright Scholar with the University of Maryland in College Park. Earlier this year he was in the same capacity with the University of California, Berkeley. His home institution is Fudan University in Shanghai, where he serves as associate professor of English.

A distinguished scholar, Lu has published numerous papers in both Chinese and English.

They include comparative studies of English and Chinese literature, as well as works related to Chinese translations of Shakespeare's writings. Lu also has published several translations of English works to Chinese, and translated Chinese writings to English. Among the familiar works that he has translated into Chinese are Peter Benchley's "Jaws" (the script version), Neil Simon's "The Prisoner of Second Avenue," and "The Moneychangers" by Arthur Hailey.

He was the speaker representing China at the 20th International Shakespeare Conference at Stratford-upon-Avon, England, in 1982, where he presented a paper entitled "Hamlet Across Space and Time." This paper subsequently was published in Shakespeare Survey. Also, he was the guest speaker at the University of Maryland's Symposium on the Renaissance in 1983.

His September 26 lecture will delineate the writing of several traditional Chinese writers. He will attempt to explain the tendency toward a persistent blown-up image of the hero in Chinese literature.

For more information about the lecture, call Dr. Mason Wang, professor of English, at extension 4328.

HIGH FIVE

The Cardinal football team dropped a heart-breaking 23-20 decision to Franklin College Saturday afternoon for their second straight loss of the season. With Saginaw Valley clinging to a 20-17 lead, Franklin quarterback Kevin O'Shea dropped back to throw with 44 seconds showing on the clock, 24 yards away from the end zone. As O'Shea was being pulled down by SVSC defensive lineman Phil Jean, he spotted an open receiver and completed a pass that resulted in the winning touchdown. The Grizzlies came up with an interception in the final seconds to ice the win. The Card's next game will be on the road against Eastern Illinois, September 21 at 2:30 p.m. The game will be broadcast live on WBCM (1440 AM) beginning at 2:15 p.m.

The women's tennis team defeated Oakland University 7-0 over the weekend. Theresa Buchholz, Terri Bako, Tammy Manninen and Linda Paeglis each notched victories for the Cardinals.
