FALL THEATRE PRODUCTION IS 'CRIMES OF THE HEART'

A crime is being committed on campus and the department of communication and theatre allegedly is responsible.

The gang is charged with rehearsing for the fall theatre production of a play by Beth Henley. The scene is Hazlehurst, Mississippi, a small southern town, the fall five years after Hurricane Camille.

The actual performance is Oct. 30 through Nov. 1 in the SVSC Theatre. "Sources close to the investigation" say curtain time is 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday.

"Crimes of the Heart" revolves around the Magrath sisters and their defense of their "baby sister," Babe, 24.

Babe is charged with shooting her husband Zakery. Babe's defense: "'Cause I didn't like his looks."

All members whose dues are paid will receive complimentary tickets for the play and are invited to attend an "afterglow" in the Alumni Lounge. Reservations are necessary, and can be made by calling club treasurer Jim Dwyer at extension 4200.

New members who pay 1987-88 dues ($6/single, $12/couple) prior to Oct. 26 also may attend the play and afterglow free of charge.

Not much for attorney Lloyd to go on. However, he is in love with the suspect and has a vendetta against the victim.

Doc Porter, a friend of the sisters, still pines for his unrequited love for Meg -- an aspiring singer/actress -- despite the fact he is married.

The group gathers in the Magrath kitchen to discuss Babe's plight and prepare for Lenny's birthday. They are joined by cousin Chick, whom many consider quite annoying.

In addition to worrying about Babe, the group also discusses the suicide of their mother and the recent illness of their grandfather.

The Dramatists Play Service has called the play "Warm hearted, irreverant, zany and brilliantly imaginative, the play teems with humanity and humor as it examines the plight of three young Mississippi sisters betrayed by their passions."

Your mission, should you choose to accept it, is to view the "Crimes of the Heart" in progress. For details and ticket information, call extension 4019.

Beware: they are a tricky crew, they could try to "act" their way into your hearts.

It's not often one likens writing to a highly physical activity, such as downhill racing; but Dr. Diane Sautter, associate professor of English, does just that.

"It's like the skier who truly loves to ski," Sautter said. "It's a challenge to go down the slope and not fall. But it's the trip that's worth it."

Sautter said she finds writing poetry play. "I thoroughly enjoy writing. I'm fully engaged in some process I love."

Sautter began writing poetry in grade school. She said she started out writing verse and a little rhyme. She continued through high school, but wrote more intensely in college. Now, Sautter has "outgrown" the rhyme and writes free verse.

"I find rhyme too restrictive," she said. "The form becomes part of what the poem is. In poetry, you meet the person in the poet. It's not a superficial meeting. The person is coming out very candidly."

Sautter describes a "successful" poem in two ways: "The poem communicates the poet's experience in such a way that the listener is caught up in some way in the poet's experience. And the listener brings his own experience into the poem. Sometimes people go to a poetry reading and literally see movies in their minds."

Sautter and two temporary English faculty members -- Dr. Carol Ellis and Jan Zerfas -- are presenting the opportunity for people to "view a movie" through a reading of their works. The poetry reading will take place from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., Oct. 26 in Lower Level Doan. In addition to this reading, Performing Poets, a student organization with Sautter as adviser, is seeking members.

While Sautter speaks with tremendous enthusiasm for the writing of poetry, she questions the limited interest society exhibits. "The biggest audience for writers now is writers," she said. "Poets in some areas of America are taken seriously, but not in America at large."

Sautter said while there are many more writers, there also are fewer Shakespeares. "But you have to consider, he had the ideal writing situation."

Shakespeare, she continued, was an actor in London when written works were in great demand. "He knew he'd get published."

Today, writers such as Sautter hope to get published. She is completing work on a collection of poems titled "Raggedy Ann Learns to Dance." The poems bear names such as "Raggedy Ann's Dollhouse," and "Raggedy Ann Changes Her Mind."
Cardinal Club leader an optimist

Looking for a way to truly enjoy your association with the College? Kert Lehman, leader of the SVSC Cardinal Club, thinks he just may have the ticket for you.

As coordinator of corporate relations and athletic development at SVSC, Lehman is responsible for the Cardinal Club's activities and soliciting funds for the athletics program.

"The activities of Cardinal Club are primarily centered around athletic events because athletic events draw people to the campus and give them the opportunity to check it out," Lehman said.

He continued: "(Members) are people who like to be involved because the College is in the community. We have a good group of those who support us because we're here."

Lehman's enthusiasm for the Cardinal Club extends to the campus as a whole. Looking into his "crystal ball," he sees the club expanding to embrace other College events, such as musical and theatrical performances.

"The College really has activities people can enjoy. We want them to be aware of the other things we have for them."

The club began during the 1984 football season. Lehman took the helm during its second year -- September 1985. And while he is pleased with the progress of the club thus far, he finds it frustrating at times because, he said, "things don't always happen as quickly as you need them or want them."

"There are many things I want to do as we grow," Lehman continued. "I want to provide for (members) the things they find enjoyable. I want to provide things they want to do and we can afford to do."

He also is excited about the College's growth and being a part of it.

"It feels good telling people about it. They see the bright spots and they react favorably."

Lehman left the Midland Community Tennis Center to join SVSC. He served there as activities coordinator for four years. Previously, he was employed by the MDS Courier Corp. in Seattle, Wash., and was a stockbroker with Shearson, Hayden and Stone in Seattle. He is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

He and his wife Mary are the parents of two children.
