SVSU to Demonstrate Holography, Product Testing, Practical Business Assistance and Industrial/Environmental Research for Manufacturers

SVSU will showcase some of its high-tech research processes to representatives of manufacturing companies from across Michigan and the upper Midwest during a two-day conference later this month at the Ryder Center for Health and Physical Education. SVSU is among dozens of colleges, universities, national laboratories, research consortia, government agencies and private corporations expected to take part in the conference designed to acquaint manufacturers with the latest developments in research, technology and marketing.

Called "Gearing Up," the conference, on August 24, 25 and 26, offers an opportunity for SVSU's Applied Technology Research Center to exhibit holograms produced by a revolutionary camera developed by faculty members from the University's College of Science, Engineering and Technology. The camera, which relies on multifaceted lenses and white light illumination of its subjects to create a three-dimensional fixed image, is believed to possess great potential in a variety of industrial applications.

Patented by SVSU, the camera will share exhibit space in the O'Neill Arena with other demonstrations and resources developed by University researchers, including a process for recovering chromium particles usually lost in electrolytic processing; soil treatment, which restricts underground oil and gas tank leakage; and a process for chemical decontamination of nuclear power plants. Also showing their wares will be representatives of the University's Independent Testing Laboratory and the SVSU Business and Industrial Development Institute.

SVSU's exhibit will be among similar displays and information booths staffed by representatives of organizations associated with NASA, the Argonne National Laboratories, Oak Ridge National Laboratory, General Motors, The Dow Chemical Company and Dow Corning, Whirlpool Corporation, The University of Michigan College of Engineering, Delta College, Wayne State University, the National Renewable Energy Laboratory and others.

For additional information about the SVSU exhibit please contact Greg Wright at 790-4124. For additional information about the conference, which is scheduled to begin with an open house at 5:30 p.m., Monday, August 24, please contact AMPM Marketing and Advertising, Inc. in Midland at 832-8813.

Library Locker Policy Developed

A new library locker policy has been developed for users of the 45 lockers located under the first floor stairwell. The new policy reads:

- Students, staff and/or guests can obtain a locker by signing for a locker number at the Circulation Desk.
- Locks are not supplied by the library; students must use their own lock.
- If a lock is attached to a locker without signing, the lock may be cut off and the contents removed.
- Once a year at the end of summer term (August 24), lockers will be cleared of contents and locks. Locks may not be put back on lockers until the first day of fall semester.
- The library will post a notice of intent to clear lockers at least 30 days before the last week of the summer semester.
- If lockers are not cleared out within seven days after the end of summer semester, the locks will be removed by Physical Plant and the contents kept in "Lost and Found" at Public Safety for 30 days before discarding. If the contents include library materials, they will be discharged and returned to the collection. Perishable food will be discarded.

Faculty and staff are asked to review this new policy with their students and remind them of the August 24 deadline for cleaning out lockers. For more information, call Jack Wood at ext. 5638.
