Graduate students in business to benefit from endowed scholarship

She not only was the First Lady of Saginaw Valley College, but Gladys Marble also was its first secretary and first administrative employee. A distinction she also held at Delta College. Her husband, Samuel Marble, was the first president of both institutions. Therefore, it is only fitting an endowment in the names of Gladys and Samuel Marble should encompass both educational institutions.

The Gladys and Samuel Marble Graduate Business Scholarship Fund will assist students who completed significant course work at Delta and are pursuing a graduate degree in business at Saginaw Valley State University.

Samuel Marble dedicated his life to higher education. A published author who began his career as a professor of Political Science, Dr. Marble served as the first president of both Delta College (1958-64) and SVSU (1964-74). He guided Saginaw Valley College through its early development, building the foundation for the thriving four-year institution it is today.

After leaving the Saginaw area, Marble pursued a career as a psychologist in Port Huron.

Gladys Marble was part of the first staff of SVC, providing administrative support to the President's Office. She also was responsible for supervising the hiring and training of college support staff members during her many years of service. Mrs. Marble also was Delta's first employee. She left Delta when Dr. Marble headed for SVC.

The Gladys and Samuel Marble Graduate Business Scholarship Fund will provide funding to students who are graduate students in business at SVSU and have shown evidence of leadership potential and community involvement.

Mrs. Marble, now of Harbor Springs, provided the initial funds to establish the scholarship.

"I have always been interested in the field of business," she said. "I've always worked in that area."

Mrs. Marble helped establish SVSU's first school of business.

Planning for IF-3 continues

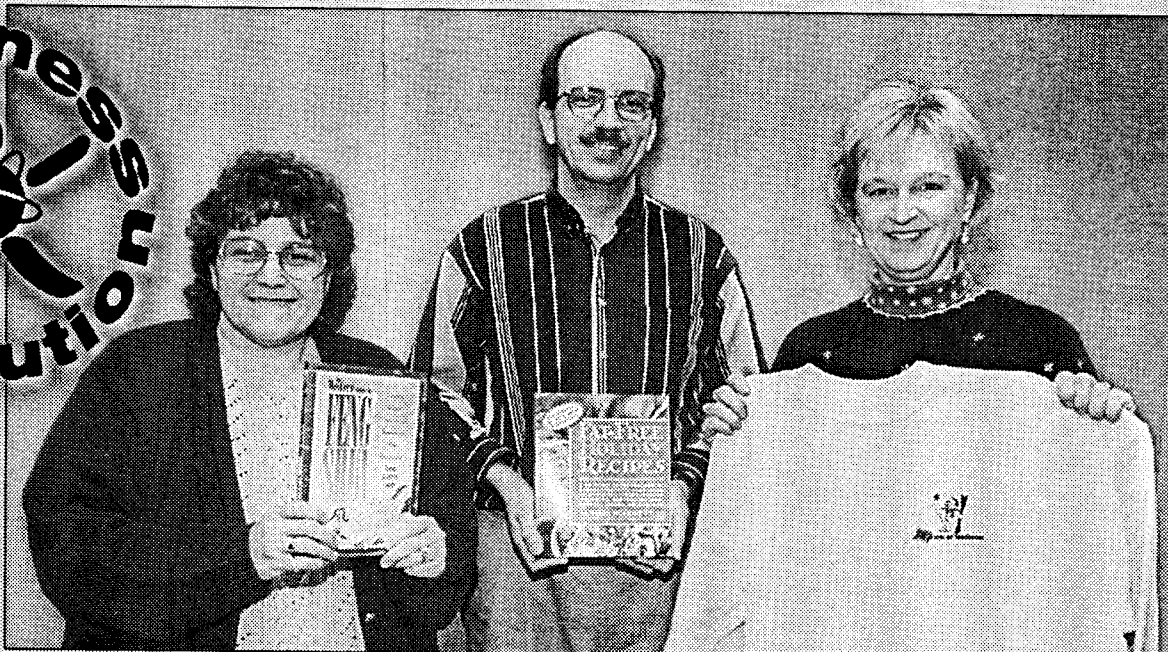

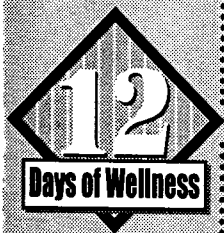

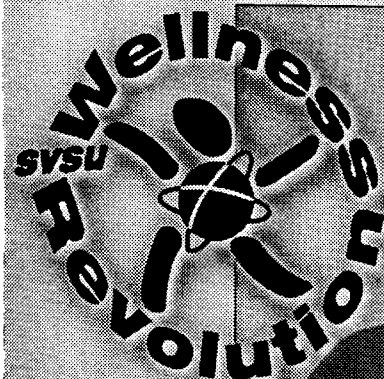

It was started three years ago, but planning for "Instructional Facility No. 3" now goes into high gear and continues with a half-dozen campus personnel. Now, the Steering Committee would like input from all faculty and staff into the process.

The Steering Committee for IF-3 planning began meeting in the Fall 1994. It includes Crystal Lange, chair, Jean Houghton, Steve Hocquard, Tom Kullgren, Pat Samolewski and Paul Saft. Subcommittees later were developed to provide recommendations in three areas: Information Technology, co-chaired by Houghton and Samolewski; Teaching-Learning Spaces, co-chaired by Lange and Saft; and Science (renovation-expansion), co-chaired by Kullgren and Samolewski. Hocquard served as an ex-officio member of all three subcommittees.

The architectural firm of Jickling Lyman Powell Associates Inc. of Troy is developing a Program Statement to solidify plans for the facility, according to Lange. She said a needs statement, with established priorities, has been developed, and the Program Statement should be completed within the next four months. The Program Statement will be forwarded to the state of Michigan for approval, Lange added.

Winners of SVSU's "12 Days of Wellness" contest show off their prizes at a December reception in Curtiss Hall. Winners of a drawing were, from left, Linda Haas, Pat Samolewski and Vivian Wressel. Crystal Lange also was a lucky winner of the drawing. Receiving shirts as a result of their successful participation in the program were Greg Coburn, Valerie Taylor, Debbie Peruski and Matt Margres.

IF-3 includes three components. The Science Building and the Zahnow Library will be expanded and renovated. New "flexible" classrooms also will be constructed. A survey of faculty in the Spring 1997 indicated a need for flexible classroom seating. Therefore, the new facility will not have fixed seating, so seating within each room can be rearranged to adapt to individual classes and instructors. There also is the potential for the College of Nursing and Allied Health Sciences to be housed in the new structure, Lange said.

Last week, Jan. 8 and 9, the architects were on site for information gathering and a walk-through of the existing facilities. Jickling Lyman Powell Associates Inc. was awarded the architectural bid for the Program Statement. The company has extensive experience with Michigan colleges and universities, including design of the Detroit College of Law Michigan State University Business Library, the Gerald R. Ford Library and the Medical Sciences Research Labs 1 and 2 at The University of Michigan, and classroom buildings at both MSU and the U of M, Central Michigan University and Wayne State University.

Public forums with the architects will be scheduled soon, Lange said.

IF-3 will cost an estimated $25 million. Twenty-five percent of the total will be required of SVSU. The $6.25 million will be from either loans or revenue bonds. The balance ($18.75 million) will be from state appropriations. The public forums will help the Steering Committee determine how best to disperse the funds among the three purposes for the structure.

Ground-breaking for IF-3 could begin as early as Spring 1999, with completion in 2001.

Members of the Information Technology subcommittee included Houghton and Samolewski, co-chairs; Hocquard, ex-officio; and members Anita Dey, Kullgren, Laurie Reed, Chuck Garrison, Deborah Bishop, John Jezierski, Sally Decker, Hank Pletscher and Norm Sterchele.

Members of the Teaching-Learning Spaces subcommittee were Lange and Saft, co-chairs, Hocquard, ex-officio; members Kris Gregory, Al Bracciano, Susie Emond, Jane Girdham, Steve Sepanski, Scott Youngstedt, Sandra Mixer and Ava Lewis.

Members of the Science (renovation-expansion) subcommittee were Kullgren and Samolewski, co-chairs, Hocquard, ex-officio; members David Swenson, David Dalgarn, Steve Lawrence, Frank Chen and Randy Hock.

SVSU personnel appear on Fox 66

Saginaw Valley State University Police Officer Bethany Rusch is joined by representatives of Saginaw County's Underground Railroad and a domestic violence survivor on WSMH Fox 66 during Mid-Michigan Focus, a program for and about people and issues in the Saginaw Valley.

Rusch, Stephanie Scheid and Ann Marie Byers from the Underground Railroad, as well as Earsline Taylor, a domestic violence victims' advocate, discussed domestic violence — its causes and help available in the region. The show will air at 10 a.m., Monday, Jan. 19.

Hosting and producing the show was Cecilia Jerome, director of Information Services. The show's director was Keith Frye, electronic media distribution and production technician for the Zahnaw Library.

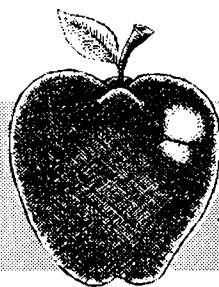

Professional Profile

• Alfred G. Bracciano, director of the Occupational Therapy Program, reviewed a regular research paper that was submitted to The Journal of Rural Health. "The Role of Public Health Nurses in Service Delivery to Youth with Mental Illness in Rural, Urban and Mixed Areas" presented research on the potential roles of public health nurses in the care of children and youth with serious mental disabilities and the incentives and barriers to the expansion of the role of public health nurses in the care of these clients. Bracciano serves as a reviewer for the Journal of Rural Health in the content areas of occupational therapy, rehabilitation and allied health.

In addition, Bracciano presented a workshop at the annual Kansas Occupational Therapy Association Conference in Rock Springs, Kan. "Therapeutic Ultrasound: Sound Information for the Occupational Therapist" included the theory and rationale for the application of therapeutic ultrasound, current research trends in the utilization of ultrasound, and clinical decision making for the therapeutic use of ultrasound. The workshop, which was attended by occupational therapists from throughout Kansas, included a lab component that was co-presented by Don Earley, a member of the OT adjunct faculty.
