Noted author to present Edwards Lecture

Kelly James Clark, author and associate professor of philosophy at Calvin College, will be the 1999 Edwards Lecturer in Philosophy and Religion at SVSU. Clark will address students in philosophy classes and the public in a lecture at 7 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 29 in Founders Hall.

Clark is the author of When Faith is Not Enough and Return to Reason. He also wrote Philosopher Who Believe, voted in 1994 one of Christianity Today’s “best books.”

During his public lecture at SVSU, Clark will discuss “Perils of Pluralism,” with a focus on conflicting claims between religions. In particular, should statements about the unique truth of a given faith be treated as unenlightened prejudice or more like rival theories in science?

“With increasing awareness of other religions, there is an increasing tendency (at least among the religious academic) toward pluralism – the belief that all religions are equally true,” Clark said. “With the rise of religious fundamentalism and in America, the religious right, there is an increasing societal tendency toward dogmatism and intolerance. The public square includes many voices which seem incapable of listening to one another. Religious believers find it difficult to converse not only with practitioners of other religions.

“The first steps toward conversation must include understanding, appreciation, and especially tolerance of those whose deepest commitments are contrary to one’s own,” he added.

Clark also will speak in SVSU classes and participate in a roundtable discussion with SVSU faculty members.

Clark has been with Calvin College since 1989. He was Visiting Professor of Moral Philosophy at the University of St. Andrews, Scotland, in 1995-96. Clark also has taught at Gordon College and the University of Notre Dame. He received his doctorate in philosophy and a master’s degree from UND. Clark also has a master’s degree from Western Kentucky University and a bachelor’s degree from Michigan State University.

Clark’s appearance is supported by a generous grant from the William and Julia Edwards family. For additional information on Clark or the Edwards Lecture in Philosophy and Religion, contact Jeffrey Koperski, assistant professor of philosophy, at ext. 7751.

Dow Visiting Scholar to lecture Sept. 14 on composition issues

Andrea A. Lunsford, distinguished professor of English at The Ohio State University, will present a public lecture at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 14 in Founders Hall. The title of her talk is “Literacy in the 21st Century.” A reception will follow her presentation.

Lunsford is appearing at SVSU as part of the Dow Visiting Scholars and Artists Program. A student and colleague of the late Professor Edward P.J. Corbett, Lunsford is widely known in the field of rhetoric and composition.

She has 13 books to her credit, either single authored or in collaboration with peers. Included are the St. Martin’s Handbook (with Robert Conners) and Essays on Classical Rhetoric and Discourse (with Conners and Lisa Ede), winner of the Modern Language Association Mina Shaughnessy Award (1985) for the year’s best book on the teaching of language and literature.

In addition to preparing the sixth edition of Preface to Critical Reading (with Victorian scholar Richard Altick), Lunsford also is the author of many book chapters and numerous professional articles. Her professional work includes more than 500 speeches, lectures, workshops and papers presented during the last 10 years.

Lunsford also will present an interdisciplinary seminar for faculty titled “Everything is an Argument” from 8:30 to 10 a.m. Wednesday, Sept. 15 and from 2:30 to 4 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 16 in 135 Zahnow Library (Writing Center). All faculty are invited.

Members of the Wilber family were on hand for the placing of a bench in Ryder Center to commemorate the family home of Harold Cornelius Wilber. The property on which Ryder Center is situated today originally was owned by the Wilbers. Wilber was born Nov. 10, 1919 to James and Blanche Wilber, joining sister Alicerose in the family home. The five-foot-long bench is flecked gray marble and is 15 inches deep and 20 inches high. The plaque was given by Wilber’s daughter Dawn and family; son James and family, and Wilber’s wife Jane to commemorate Harold Wilber’s 80th birthday.

Lunsford’s schedule on Thursday, Sept. 16 includes lunch with interested faculty and an informal discussion about intellectual property from 1 to 2:15 p.m. A location is TBA. She also is scheduled to visit a number of SVSU English classes.

At present, in addition to her faculty appointment at OSU, Lunsford is director of the university’s Center for the Study of Teaching of Writing. She has served her profession as consultant for writing programs and departmental reviews for many colleges and universities.

For further information on Lunsford’s visit to SVSU, contact Basil Clark, professor of English, at ext. 4312.
Modern printmaking focus of first University Art Gallery exhibition

The University Art Gallery will open the 1999-00 academic year with an exhibition that illustrates the great variety of expression possible using modern printmaking techniques. The show will run from Sept. 2 through 28.

"Creating original prints in America had its beginnings during the Colonial period and continues to grow and diversify today," said Barron Hirsch, gallery director and professor of art. "Using the traditional processes of woodblock, linocut, etching, silkscreen and lithograph, artists continue to produce images that utilize the unique character of each of these graphic mediums.

"In addition, innovative processes such as monoprint and collagraph have expanded the possibilities of artistic production," Hirsch said.

This exhibit, assembled from Detroit collections and the Saginaw Art Museum, includes works by Thomas Benton, Grant Wood, Roy Lichtenstein and Richard Estes.

Gallery hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Monday and Wednesday; Tuesday and Thursday afternoons by appointment. For further information, call ext. 5684 or 4391.

Parents of freshmen resident students perform heavy labor, signaling the start of another academic year at SVSU. Check-in took place last weekend, with a record number of resident students moving in due to the opening of the new living center. Campus Life organized a number of Welcome Week activities, including outdoor concerts in the Zahnow Amphitheatre.
Professional Profile

• Elaine C. Stephens, professor of teacher education, and Jean E. Brown, now of Rhode Island College, had their most recent book published, A Handbook of Content Literacy Strategies (Christopher-Gorden Pub., 2000) is the 10th book the two have written together since 1988.

• Dee Storey, professor of teacher education, made an in-service presentation on reading and literature to start out the new school year for the Foster Grandparent Program, which is sponsored by the Saginaw County Commission on Aging. Also, Storey was voted vice chair of the Awards Committee (1999-00) and vice chair of the Carter G. Woodson Committee (1999-00), both committees of the National Council for the Social Studies.

Across Campus

• The campus community extends condolences:
  - Christina Chapski, assistant athletic trainer, whose father, Jan Chapski, died Aug. 12.
  - Paul Saft, former director of institutional research, whose father, Paul Saft, died Aug. 17.
  - David Stanton, assistant professor of biology, whose father, Ben Stanton, died Aug. 8.
  - Gerald Stevens, groundkeeper, whose father, Kenneth Stevens, died Aug. 19.

Have You Heard?

• Participants from SVSU in the American Cancer Society’s Relay for Life in Saginaw County walked a combined 350 miles on the track during a 24-hour period, raising more than $2,000 for the charity. A total of more than $50,000 raised at the event will support cancer research and fund programs that help pay for vital patient services.

• Reserve parking permits for 1999-00 are available at the Department of Public Safety Parking Bureau. Current permits expire Wednesday, Sept. 15. Permits can be purchased for $20 Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. F Lot, J-3 and half of L Lot will be reserved parking (permit required). For more information, call ext. 4140.

• Faculty and staff are reminded that THECARD is necessary for entry and use of Ryder Center facilities. Access will be limited to the recreation entrance on the ground level, northwest corner of the building. For more information, call ext. 7300.

• The SVSU Foundation has $53,000 available for resource grants this year. The grants must be applied toward enhancing scholarship, furthering the academic and cultural missions of the University or making a significant impact on the University community. Grants will be made primarily to programs or projects that benefit SVSU students, and can be completed within a one-year period. Oct. 1 is the deadline for applications, which are available from Emmie Busch in the Foundation Office.

High Five

• Faculty and staff may pick up a Cardinal Athletic Card from Karen Klemish between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. weekdays in the Ryder Center athletic office. The card grants admission to all regularly-scheduled home football and basketball games. Additional cards for spouses and family members are $20.

• The Cardinal football coaches invite faculty and staff to participate in a new “Guest Coach of the Day” program. This is an opportunity to shadow a coach on game day, from pre-game meal to the sidelines during a game. Those interested should call ext. 7315. Reservations are on a first-come, first-served basis.

• Bubba’s Roadside Inn is the site for this year’s “Randy Awrey Coaches Corner Show.” The one-hour weekly broadcast runs from 6 to 7 p.m. Thursdays preceding all Cardinal football games. Back for his sixth year as host of the show is WSMH Fox 66’s Bill Hobson, who also serves as color commentator on the Cardinal Air Force game broadcasts. For more information, call the Ryder Center at ext. 7300.
Norma Gase Zivich enjoys the variety that comes with her position in the SVSU Foundation, so much so that she has devoted 20 years to the University.

“There’s satisfaction in knowing I helped raise $350,000 during an annual fund campaign, but the real satisfaction comes from the feedback I receive from people,” Zivich said.

She emphasized her contact with donors makes her efforts meaningful.

“I’ve met some really terrific people who have been so nice to work with,” Zivich said. Recently, she coordinated the dedication of an engraved marble bench that was donated by the family of Harold Wilber, who originally owned the property on which Ryder Center sits.

“The Wilbers were just so appreciative of everything I did for them, and that’s what makes doing this job so worthwhile.”

In addition to the people, Zivich also enjoys the diverse responsibilities of her job. As director of annual giving, Zivich heads the Annual Fund campaign that brought in $350,000 in contributions during the past year. Zivich organizes a committee of 100 community volunteers who assist in soliciting funds for scholarships and other programs at the University. Zivich prepares content for the Report of Annual Giving, which lists the names of individual donors and organizations that support SVSU.

Zivich also works with the Association for the Advancement of SVSU (AASVSU), handling communications and arranging events and receptions throughout the year. She has organized a number of dedications and ground-breakings, including ceremonies for the Julia Stacey Edwards Bell Tower, Instructional Facility No. 3, the Crystal M. Lange College of Nursing and Health Sciences, and wall plaques for The Campaign for Distinction.

Commencement ceremonies likely would not come off as smoothly without Zivich working hard behind the scenes to make the event enjoyable for the graduates and their families.

“It’s very challenging to coordinate an event that involves 4,000 people,” she noted. “My biggest concern is that the script will not be missing any pages and that, no matter what, it’s available on the day of the ceremony.”

Away from the office, Zivich is researching her family history, dating back to the Revolutionary War.

“It started when I wanted to join the D.A.R. (Daughters of the American Revolution), and started tracing my ancestry back to that era,” she said.

Her investigation turned up three ancestors, including Nicholas Danforth, who also was one of 16 founders of Harvard University in Boston. According to Zivich, Danforth was born in England in 1589, came to Cambridge, Mass., in 1634 and died in 1638. Her other family ties include Capt. William Stevens, who served in the Revolutionary War from 1776 to 1780, and Capt. Timothy Lull, who served in the French & Indian War from 1755 to 1760.

Zivich and her husband, Matt, professor of art at SVSU, are looking forward to Valentine’s Day, which is the due date for their first grandchild. The mother is Norma’s daughter, Michelle.
Reaching for the Stars!

Tell William Albe he has his head in the sky and he most likely will agree. When the adjunct professor of physics is not studying the stars, he’s flying to them in his Piper (not a Saratoga like the one John Kennedy Jr. was flying when he crashed in July).

“I enjoy flying at night a lot,” Albe said. “I can see the cities spread out and the cars creeping along the highway. When Hale-Bopp was in the sky, I flew above the haze layer for a better look.”

He said the combination of astronomy and flying works well for him.

“I have a good sense of direction from astronomy for my flying – how the earth is rotating. I can picture in my mind the phases of the moon.

“Astronomy helps me picture where I am in the airplane in response to the outside world. It’s like being in a video game.”

Albe has been an adjunct instructor for 14 years, solely teaching astronomy.

“I’m blessed with a very interesting subject,” he said. “I try to point out the beauty of astronomy in my class.

“The basic tenet I try to teach in class – since many of the students are non-science majors – is that science is not a mystery, but observations and logical thinking to reach a theory of the way things are.”

Albe must be doing something right. Between him and Laurie Reed, they consistently fill astronomy classes to capacity.

And Albe said he feels as much a part of the faculty as he would if he were permanent.

“I don’t feel the relationship between adjunct and permanent faculty is at all cliché. I’ve always felt I’ve been part of a team,” he said.

Astronomy is an avocation for Albe. His “day” job for the past 22 years has been as an associate scientist with Dow Corning Corp. Prior to that, he was with The Dow Chemical Co. for 10 years.

His association with Dow Corning and Dow Chemical has been beneficial to the Physics Department. Through Albe’s employers, SVSU has acquired various equipment, such as a vacuum evaporator (changes aluminum to a mirror surface), an X-ray machine, an infra-red analyzer for the Chemistry Department and materials for the holography area.

At the same time, Albe said his teaching here has improved his presentation skills for his job at Dow Corning.

“That’s the great thing about having my feet in two different areas,” he said.

Albe constructs telescopes in his basement in Midland, mostly for himself, although he also has made them as gifts.

Albe tries twice a semester to take his students to the Observatory near the Public Safety Building so they can see the beauty of the skies and use the telescope. During these sessions, he uses a special flashlight to point out specific constellations.

Albe also uses the World Wide Web. He has his own web site, plus he posts a detailed course syllabus and many assignments with special links on his site at www.svsu.edu/~wralbe.

Albe and his wife, Peggy, have two daughters and live in Midland.
